Here's a little primer on this month's meeting:

For over 30 years, Willis Towers Watson and the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) have been partnered in the Construction Safety Excellence Awards (CSEA) program and for the eighth consecutive year, we are proud to capture and share these best practices. The CSEA program is the industry's elite safety excellence awards program for construction companies of all sizes and types of construction. The CSEA selection process is comprehensive with each application reviewed for evidence of company management commitment, active employee participation, safety training, work site hazard identification and control, and safety program innovation.

The AGC and Willis Towers Watson believe that risk control and safety practices are not proprietary so please feel free to share this document with other contractors, subcontractors, design professionals, family members, owners and other construction partners that can influence our industry so every worker returns home safely to their family.
